16 December 1987

Dear Participant

On behalf of the Department of International Politics, may I welcome all of you to the 1987 annual conference of the British International Studies Association.

It was here in Aberystwyth in 1919 that the first chair of International Politics was created. Since then the discipline has both expanded and matured, so that today it has a significant place in most British institutions of higher education. This was recognized in 1975 by the founding of BISA, which represents and furthers the interests of both scholars and practitioners in the broad field of international studies.

The Department is delighted to host this year's conference, which brings together more than 175 scholars, researchers, diplomats, and postgraduate students from Britain and abroad, some from as far away as New Zealand and Japan. My colleagues and I hope you will enjoy the conference and your stay in Aberystwyth.

Yours sincerely

John Garnett

The British International Studies Association gratefully acknowledges the financial contributions made to the conference by the University College of Wales from its Trefloyne Fund and by the Department of International Politics from its Woodrow Wilson Endowment.
